[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

Norfolk, January 20, 1891.

Seaton Haxtall, the young negro man who attempted an assault on a young lady of Berkley in the early part of last night, was brought before Justice J. P. Jones this morning and identified by the young lady as her assaulant. The negro was then sent on the County Court for trial and committed to jail. Haxtall stuffed the lady's mouth full of dirt to prevent her outcries, but she fought him off and escaped. She was returning from a store in Norfolk at the time of the assault. There was considerable excitement in Berkley last night over the affair.

The grand jury term of the County Court commenced in Portsmouth today, bringing a large number of country people to town. There is a heavy criminal docket to dispose of.

Agricultural Society. RICHMOND, VA , January 20, 1891,

To the Editor of the Dispatch : The announcement this morning that The announcement this morning that Major A. H. Drewry declines to accept the position of president of the Virginia Agricultural and Mechanical Society permits me to address you upon the question at the election of a gentleman to supply the vacancy thus created. As is known to the readers of the Southern Planter I have through the columns of that journal advocated the election of Lieutenant-Governor election of Lieutenant-Governor Hoge Tyler to the position of president. This f did not merely as my own selection of the fittest gentleman to fill the position at this peculiar crisis in the history of the of the fittest gentleman to fin the position at this peculiar crisis in the history of the society, but as the mouth field of a large number of the leading farmers of the State who thought with me that it was of para-mount importance that the president of mount importance that the president of the society should be himself a farmer and one who, from his position and as the representative of one of the great agricultural sections of the State, could help to heal up the breach between city and country which undoubtedly has existed and which, whilst it continued, could not fail heal up the breach between city and country which undoubtedly has existed and which, whilst it continued, could not fail to react disastrously on the fortunes of the society and the success and progress of the agricultural interests of the State. Before placing his name before the public I ascertained from Mr. Tyler that if elected he would consent to act and read a letter from him in which he said that although he did not seek the position yet that, appreciating the importance of the crisis, he would throw himself with energy and devotion into the work, and he believed that success could be achieved. As I felt that the proposition of his name would come with greater weight from a citizen of Richmond than from myself I placed the matter in the hands of one of our leading citizens who was prepared at the meeting last Thursday to have moved his election to the office. The voice of acclamation, however, with which the name of that tried and old friend of the society, Major A. H. Drewry, was received prevented any such presentation. It is exceedingly to be regretted that before presenting Major Drewry's name the mover had not ascertained (as I had done) that he would not accept the office, and it is more to be regretted that his own public declination was not received. No man could be found better fitted than Major Drewry to fill the position, but it was ungenerous to try to force him into the office. After the meeting I wrote Lieutenant-Governor Tyler explaining what had been done, and I have to-day a reply from him which I venture (unknown to him) to send you for publication, as it so forcibly exhibits his peculiar fitness to fill the position of president of the society. I have no authority now to say that he will if elected accept the office, but I do still feel that if his services could be procured in that capacity they ought to be availed of, and in the hope that other friends of the society may see the subject in this light I venture to suggest action in that direction at the meeting called to deal with the

My Dear Sir,—Your letter announcing the result of the meeting of the State Agricultural Society just received.

Permit me to express my appreciation of your kindness in having suggested my name in connection with the presidency at the meeting in the columns of the Southern Planter.

INTERMEDIATE CELEBRATION. Planter.

I think the society has acted wisely in selecting Major Drewry—a gentleman so well fitted in every way for the position. It would have been a serious inconvenience to have had the duties of this office imposed on me at this time, and I am greatly rejoiced that I was not honored according to the desires of yourself and other friends of mine.

If the society is prudently, judiciously, and recommically managed it can be made.

LENINGTON, V.A., January 20.—The intermediate celebration of the Graham-Lee Literary Society of Washington and Lee University took place last night in the University chapel. The exercises were opened with a brief speech by the President, Joel Funkhouser, of Missouri. At the close of his speech he introduced as orator of the evening C. D. Barksdale, of Virginia. The subject of the latter's speech was "The New Republic," under which title he discussed the recent changes that have taken place in Brazil. friends of mine.

If the society is prudently, judiciously, and reomonically managed it can be made, in my opinion, one of the great agencies in helping to develop and advertise the wonderful advantages of our dear old State, and I am more encouraged to hope for good results from the society now than I have ever been. In gathering up the reins again and in this reorganization of the society a spirit of progressiveness is evinced which reflects credit upon those associated and in sympathy with the onward march to prosperity beginning to pulsate all over the State, and I rejoice that the fire of determination not to let the old society die was kindled in the country, and is going to be fanned into a full fiame and kept burning by the good people of our beautiful capital city, around whose walls and in whose determent of this State bared their breasts and offered their lives.

It takes but a glanes retrospectively over our past history to see in every emergency and time of trial how true and heroic has been the spirit of our people. In the varied fortunes through which we have passed, with flood and drought, threatened conflict, political and social, Virginia's noble sons have evinced that spirit of endurance and determination to overcome all difficulties which has made the name of Virginian woodly accompany of the result of the second of the contract of the country of the country

Next in order was the debate on the question whether the Indian Territory should be thrown open to white settlers. This was discussed by Messra J. B. Ranson, of Virginia, and W. F. Hays, of Arkansas, for the affirmative, and J. A. McClure and W. P. Johnson, of Virginia, for the negative. All the speeches were good, but those of Messra. McClure and Johnson were especially well received.

THE MEDALLIST.

At the conclusion of the debate the committee, consisting of Dr. McBryde, Colonil Semmes, and Mr. Frank Glasgow, awarded the medal for the best debate to Mr. Johnson. The decision was received with great applause, and the people of our community were especially pleased, because Mr. Johnson is a native of this county.

But I believe of all the heroic struggles that have been made in the past none quals that the State is making to-day to recover lost vantage ground, and though for the last decade or more the patient toil of the farmer has mot with little reward and the result has been discouraging, we now see the dawn of a better day; the surface wealth, though diminished and manaponsive, has but forced the deeper thrust, and the hidden wealth is coming to

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY AND ARSON. Negroes Failing to Murder W. V. Mabry Fire His Stables-A Littleton Hotel. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

(Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.)

Weldon, N. C., January 20, 1891.

News has just been received here of a dastardly attempt to rob and burn the premises of Mr. W. V. Mabry, in Northampton county. Several negroes called there a few nights ago and asked Mr. Mabry to come out, they wanted to see him on particular business. Owing to the lateness of the hour Mr. Mabry refused to open his door, saying they could see him the following day. In about two hours after turning them away he discovered that his barn and stables were on fire. He gave the alarm and quickly rushed out to the stables, in which he had two fine horses. It was all he could do to save them, and when brought from the burning building their manes and tails had been burned off. under such restrictions as may be provided by law.

3. That all planting-grounds be surveyed and require a reasonable price per acre per annum from the occupants, and give a lease on said grounds not to exceed fitteen years.

4. That the property in planted oysters is of a different character from other property; the penalties for stealing planted cysters should be stringent and severe.

5. That planting or depositing cyster-shells on planting-grounds should be encouraged by legislation, and we recommend the planting-grounds used for depositing shells be exampt from rent for two years and the money invested in shells; be exempt from taxation for two years, as frequently the experiment of depositing is a failure and total loss to the planter.

6. Define by legislation what is a "natural cyster-rock," and let that be strictly and rigidity enforced so that further encroachments on the "natural cyster-rock," by thapsectors in assigning planting-grounds may be stopped.

7. That dredging be prohibited as now provided in the present law.

8. That legislation should be had on the "patent cyster toogs."

9. That we respectfully but earnestly ask for

That legislation should be had on the "patent syster longs."

"In that we respectfully but earnestly ask for the repeal of the law permitting "summer oystering" off Gwynn's Isiand in Cheespeake bay, last summer the syster-recks off Gwynn's Island were worked and literally ruined, and if permitted to be worked again the coming summer they will be entirely destroyed. To have these natural syster-rocks ruined and destroyed will be asad blow on us and our families. Have we a remedy? Can his Excellency the Governor of Virginia give us any relief from "summer cystering"?

10. We deem it unnecessary to state our views about the financial features in a law to be passed, except to say we are willing to pay reasonable taxes to be fixed by law.

11. That we do not intend to dictate to the Governor of Virginia about having an extra session of the Legislature; yet we do hope, should there be an extra seesion, that an oyster law will be passed and settle the very many rexed questions now agitating the public mind and producing litigations in our courts.

12. That a copy of this preamble and these resolutions be sent to his Excellency P. W. McKinner, Governor of Virginia, with the hope, if possible, to aid us in any way, and specially call his attention to our grievance on "summer oystering," which was repeated in the oyster bill herefused to approve at the last season of the Gereal assembly.

He wants the citizens of the town to donate $10,000 for the purpose. Some favor the issuing of town bonds to that amount and others are opposed. Such an enterprise would certainly be popular when the health, climate, and splendid mineral waters of Littleton are considered.

The people of Murifreesboro are quite jubilant over the new railroad to that place. Work has commenced and it is proposed to push it until completed.

A very shocking suicide occurred at Lewiston, in Bertie county. Mr. John Ballance, a prosperous merchant and who had kept the largest country store in Eastern Carolina, became financially embarrassed. He told his wife he was going to kill himself, and she had watched him all night. Early in the morning she stepped out of the room and left another lady in the room with him. He was lying on a lounge, and as soon as his wife left the room he put a pistol to his head and fired. He died in an hour.

Steps have been taken to establish a newspaper at Aulander, alittle town on the Norfolk and Carolina railroad.

Here are presented circumstances that occur but seldom, and, kind reader, you are not likely again in your lifetime to have presented the opportunity for buying a large and well-ar-ranzed factory and foundry, fully equipped, in active and profitable operation, and with the good-will and large trade won and held by the labor of many years of an enterprising firm of high standing. It is likely that you can pur-chase this entire outiff, Real Essate, Machinery Patents, Patterns, good-will, material on band, and an established trade, for less than one third of its value, and then you can go right on with
